

Proof statement- (after a long interview with ChatGPT) (transparency diligence in play :))

I design modern, responsive websites for university department associations that want to attract more students, members, and sponsors. I transform outdated websites into polished, engaging experiences that reflect the energy of the community behind them. As a student, I understand what makes a department website feel welcoming, credible, and worth exploring. If you're responsible for your department association's website and want it to make a stronger first impression, email me.

Why this would work when i have LinkedIn and CV?

I think this will work because a portfolio will help university associations to “feel” my work, and not just read my achievements. They will be able to experience what my work looks like and why I would be the best candidate for the job.
